Drunk Drivers Stay On Roads Despite Arrests

By GERRY SWITZER and GORDON WINTERS Star Staff Writers

Drunk drivers in Lincoln sometimes can stay on the road - even after several arrests and even though the law says the penalty should be stiffer with each offense.

John Doe can pile up multiple violations for driving while intoxicated (DWI) and each time be prosecuted as though it were a first offense.

For a first-time conviction, state law says a person may be fined $100 and his driver's license suspended six months.

A second-time offender may be fined $300, sent to jail for up to three months and his driver's license suspended one

A third-time offender may be sent to the Nebraska Penal Complex and his driver's license suspended one year when he

Theory Of Deterrence

The theory behind the law is that the tough penalties for repeaters will keep the drunk from killing and maiming people on the highway.

That alcohol and gasoline don't mix is illustrated by 1974 figures for Lincoln that show there were 243 accidents, six of which were fatalities, in which drinking was involved.

The administration of justice is such that sometimes — in fact, police say, quite often — the repeat offenders are still permitted to weave along the road.

There are a number of reasons for this, according to prosecutors.

The most common reason is that before a person can be convicted of a second offense DWI, his first case must be finished in court — with a guilty verdict.

If a person is picked up for DWI before he is found guilty on a prior charge, the prosecutor is legally barred from filing a charge of second offense.

"A person can be picked up (for DWI) every day" between his arrest and trial and never be found guilty of second offense DWI, City Prosecutor Norman Langemach said.

It Can Be A Year

The time between an arrest and final conviction could be as long as a year if a person appeals a guilty verdict to District Court, Langemach said.

The appeal usually lasts about five or six months, but delays will be granted if either side has a good reason. Records for Lincoln show that during 1974, 1,734 charges were filed for first offense drunk driving or driving with more than .10% alcohol in the blood (similar charges filed under separate laws)

Two hundred two persons were charged with second offenses and 25 were charged with third offenses.

When a charge of second offense is filed in Municipal Court, records indicate the charge is sometimes reduced. Information on the reduction of third offenses is not available. 53 Of 202 Reduced

Of the 202 second offense charges, 53 have been reduced. (Forty-three of the second offense cases were still pending when the statistics were compiled in January.

Those statistics, Langemach claimed, show that he and his staff are not too easily talked into agreeing to reduce the charge in return for a guilty plea.

One reason second offense charges are reduced, Langemach said, is that good records of a prior DWI conviction sometimes cannot be obtained from courts in other parts

Second offenses may be reduced for lack of adequate information on prior DWI convictions or if the prosecutor decides - after further study - that the evidence is not as strong for conviction as it initially appeared, Langemach said.

However, in some cases, after further study, the charge may be amended to a more serious offense, he added.

The amount of plea bargaining in DWI cases is becoming less, Langemach said.

We're getting tighter now. We're getting better reporting and testimony from our police officers and better records from other courts. We've got better methods of getting our witnesses into court and we have more experience in presenting the legal issues.

"Anything you can do to increase the probability that you will win the case means you are less likely to plea bargain," Langemach said.

because the penalties are so severe.

When a person who has been convicted of first and second offense DWI is arrested for the third time, prosecution of the case is turned over to the Lancaster County attorney's office. And Chief Deputy County Atty. Bernie McGinn said that prosecutors are reluctant to file the third offense charge

A prosecutor must decide, he said, whether the best interests of society would be served by sending a person to prison for nothing but alcohol-related offenses.

"On third-offense charges the judge has little discretion — the law provides for one to three years in the Penitentiary, with no provision for a fine or jail time," McGinn said.

McGinn said the county attorney's office has also adopted an informal rule of not filing third offense charges if the last DWI offense was 10 or more years ago.

Gaughan Supports Leniency Public Defender T. Clement Gaughan supports the prosecutors' tendency to be lenient in filing charges against repeaters. He said the county attorney's office is being "practicalminded" in not going back more than 10 years. And he says he does not believe people should be sent to prison for DWI It's better to put them into a probation program where

Avalanche Kills Three; Snow Stops Searchers

CASTLE ROCK, Wash. (AP) - The search for survivors of an avalanche that killed three members of a university climbing class was called off Sunday night because of 60-mile-an-hour winds and heavy snow.

Skamania County Sheriff's Department officials said three of the 29 members of the University of Puget Sound class died in the avalanche Saturday night near Mt. St. Helens. Twentythree others were rescued.

The names of the dead and missing were not disclosed.

One of the survivors, Skip Strictland, a 21-year-old senior, said he and some companions were on the edge of the avalanche area. "We didn't realize how serious it was until we heard someone calling for help and then saw just snow where there had been tents," he said. "Our leader, Harmon Jones, dug out of his tent where someone was injured. It was real heavy wet snow.

"About eight of us got out really quick. We knew people had to get out so we got people out. We worked in groups. One father was digging out his son. People cut holes in the side of their tents with knives.'

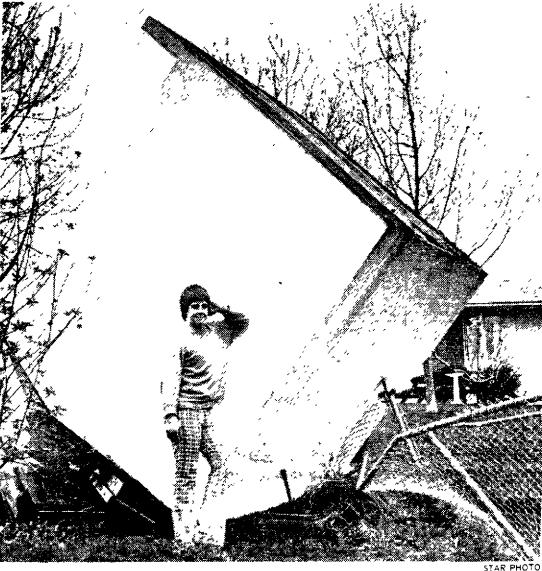

Strictland said one of the missing students lived in his dormitory.

"There's a good chance he's not alive," Strictland said. "Part of your training is how to deal with dangers. That is the risk you take.'

Ctifford Sees Viet Fall As Kissinger's Failure

Secretary Clark M. Clifford says the imminent fall of Saigon to Communist control signals the failure of Henry A. Kissinger's policies in Indochina and around the world.

He called on President Ford to replace Kissinger as secretary of state and senior White House foreign policy adviser.

"While Mr. Kissinger was having successes, his star rose meteorically," Clifford said. "Now when the inevitable reverses come, his star seems to be falling just as fast as when it went up.'

Clifford, the last secretary of defense under the Democratic administration of the late President Lyndon B. Johnson, was interviewed in his law office in Washington.

A close friend to Johnson long before he entered the White House, Clifford turned against U.S. involvement in Vietnam shortly after becoming secretary of defense in 1968.

Clifford first sought to persuade Johnson to withdraw American forces, then later became a public critic of the U.S. commitment to the Saigon government.

He said Kissinger and former President Nixon needlessly sacrificed 20,000 American lives and $70 to $80 billion by not withdrawing American troops from Vietnam as soon as they succeeded the Democratic administration to power in 1969.

"I always had the feeling that Mr. Nixon and Mr. Kissinger failed to take advantage of difficult and even bitter lessons that had been learned even before they came into power in the United States," he said.

Clifford said the United States gave the South Vietnamese "practically everything to fight with, but in reality they had nothing to fight for. When the showdown came, they were not willing to light and die for the Thieu government.

Of Kissinger, Clifford said the secretary of state "is very wrong when he suggests that every part of the world (including Vietnam) has the same importance of some other part of the world.

"I think the whole power philosophy (of Kissinger's) is outmoded.

Clifford went on, "I am opposed to personalizing the conduct of foreign policy as Mr. Kissinger has conducted it. It makes every situation either an enormous triumph or a bitter defeat for foreign policy.

"It looks as if it were a yo-yo. It's up, it's down, it's up, it's down, and I think that's very bad.'

He said he thinks Kissinger should have remained in Washington and made policy decisions instead of first shuttling back and forth to Paris in 1972 and more recently to Mideastern capitals.

Asked if Kissinger should be replaced, Clifford said. "I think it would be in the best interest of our country if a change were to be made . . . I am of the view that in view of the present posture of the United States and the policy he has advocated these past six years, we would be better off if Mr. Ford would make a change in the secretaryship of

In the interview, Clifford talked at length about the American role in Indochina and its likely aftermath here, saying it is inevitable that there be a period of "uncertainty, uneasiness and soulsearching" as a result of the Communist

"I believe that temporarily we are going to get a traumatic reaction from the American people," he said. "I think it must be understood it is not a return to isolationism.

"I doubt that there is any thoughtful concept of the old fortress American theory of foreign policy."

For the immediate postwar period, Clifford said the United States should provide $100 million to $200 million in nonmilitary U.S. aid to a Communist government in South Vietnam, probably delivered through the Red Cross or Quaker organization.

He said 30,000 to 50,000 South Vietnamese refugees should be admitted to this country, but Clifford said Communist-inspired civil wars in a number of Asian countries are possible and even likely now, but they pose no threat to U.S. interests.

Clifford said he doubted if Hanoi will be fostering revolution throughout Southeast Asia. "My guess is North Vietnam is going to be pretty busy for the next few years attempting to unify Vietnam," he said.

Beyond that Clifford said the United States should not be alarmed if Communist-led civil wars occur in Malaysia, Thailand or the Philip-

Clifford Sees Viet Fall As Kissinger's Failure

WASHINGTON (AP) - Former Defense Secretary Clark M. Clifford says the imminent fall of Saigon to Communist control signals the failure of Henry A. Kissinger's policies in Indochina and around the world.

He called on President Ford to replace Kissinger as secretary of state and senior White House foreign policy adviser.

"While Mr. Kissinger was having successes, his star rose meteorically," Clifford said. "Now when the inevitable reverses come, his star seems to be falling just as fast as when it went up."

Clifford, the last secretary of defense under the Democratic administration of the late President Lyndon B. Johnson, was interviewed in his law office in Washington.

A close friend to Johnson long before he entered the White House, Clifford turned against U.S. involvement in Vietnam shortly after becoming secretary of defense in 1968.

Clifford first sought to persuade Johnson to withdraw American forces, then later became a public critic of the U.S. commitment to the Saigon government.

He said Kissinger and former President Nixon needlessly sacrificed 20,000 American lives and $70 to $80 billion by not withdrawing American troops from Vietnam as soon as they succeeded the Democratic administration to power in 1969. Farmers Pledge Acreage Cut Bunger of Hildreth, leader of an effort to cut back production of grain crops this year, says he has pledges from farmers in 14 midwestern states to cut one to three million acres from production in each state.

A meeting earlier this week with leaders from the 14 states resulted in the pledges, Bunger says. He says the significance of the pledges will become apparent in July and August when the total acreage cutback becomes known.

Bunger also says the major efwill be made in 1976. He Robert L. Taylor.

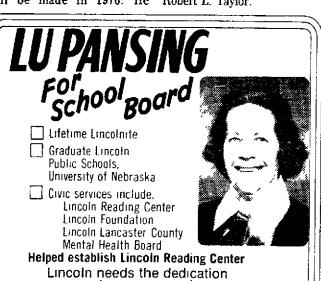

Hildreth (AP) - Harold describes this year's effort as a preliminary to the major drive next year. A reasonable goal, says Bunger, would be 75% of the pledged cutback in each state. He says 3.5 million acres have been pledged to the cutback in Nebraska.

Another meeting of leaders in the cutback effort is scheduled July 8.

'Making A Good City Better'

When he was first elected mayor eight years ago Sam Schwartzkopf was an administrative and political greenhorn, to be sure, but he was a listener, eager to learn the ropes, welcoming good advice and interested in hearing what Lincolnites all across the spectrum had to say. With his smashing re-election triumph four years ago, Mayor Sam stopped listening, in our opinion, and that is one of the major problems facing him and the city today.

Sam Schwartzkopf has not been a bad mayor; Lincoln is a good clean city with a talented citizenry and a complex decisionmaking structure and it can get along, if it has to, without dynamic leadership at the top. And it has. Many of the things that the mayor takes credit for that have happened during the past eight years would have happened with or without him and in certain areas he has been gently nudged and sometimes pushed into a leadership role. In some areas, there has been a leadership vacuum which has been filled, in part, by the City Council. Some of those areas in which the mayor has come up short: adequate advance planning for the use of revenue sharing funds, especially in the human services area; planning ahead for the phasing out of the Lincoln Electric System's steam heat operation and taking a needed look, in that regard, to the possibilities of using solid waste; an action plan for street improvements and — the Centrum project aside - the overall problem of parking. In the aforementioned areas, and in others, executive leadership has been exerted at a minimal level.

The mayor, on the other hand, has during his eight years in office devised a workable snow removal program; he has taken the proper cautious approach to planning and zoning and has not flinched from using his veto pen (in the zoning area he and his opponent have agreed more often than not); he endorses the separate corrections function idea which was initiated and quietly pushed by others, among them council members; he has implemented some changes in the police department that were recommended by a council-initiated study and during his administration was begun a promising neighborhood redevelopment program. But again, in some of this, the mayor did not lead, but was led.

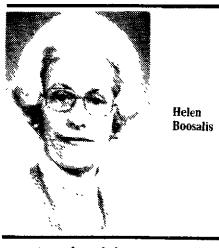

Although Sam Schwartzkopf has been "not a bad mayor," that is not enough for Lincoln. This city deserves the best mayor it can elect.

Lincoln voters on May 6 have the opportunity to vote for a candidate, Helen Boosalis, who in our opinion would be an excellent mayor of the City of Lincoln.

Mrs. Boosalis has been president of the City Council during some of these past few years when the council was forced, by default, to take on executive as well as legislative functions.

It is safe to say that few Lincolnites have as deep and thorough an understanding of Lincoln municipal affairs as does Helen Boosalis. And few public servants have been as open and as sensitive to the needs of differing elements of the community as she.

And one of those elements with needs she has been sensitive to is the business community. Her record during 16 years of the City Council completely refutes the irresponsible assertsions that have floated about during the campaign that she is "anti business" or "anti growth." She has been a respecter of and has cooperated with business interests downtown and elsewhere and she has assiduously worked for orderly growth and the record will bear her out on that.

The fact that she is willing to listen to any and all interests, however, and the fact that she speaks her own mind and is fiercely independent may stick in the throats of some, but we think a vast majority of Lincolutes respect those qualities.

Something exciting is happening in this town. Increasingly, by greater numbers, average citizens who never were a part of it before are beginning to realize that they can affect the decisions which affect them. They can have input in government; they can be a part of building the future of their city. Helen Boosalis has asked for that input and interest and welcomes it. It is a cliche but it applies in this instance: Helen Boosalis is a public official who listens. Through her, the people will have a voice.

In our opinion, Helen Boosalis' style, competence and approach more than the incumbent's are complementary to the image Lincolnites hold of this city. And that, too, should count for something.

The Lincoln Star supports Helen Boosalis for mayor.

Hey, here comes May. It's gonna be a really big May Day for the communist world this year. That comes Thursday.

Nebraska football fans will get a look at all the new quarterbacks in the Husker spring game. That comes Saturday.

You might call it Big Red week all over the

Starting today, the Legislature heads into its final four weeks of the 1975 session.

Speaker Jules Burbach is aiming for adjournment May 23, just before the three-day Memorial Day holiday which extends from May

In order to reach that goal, Burbach plans to work the senators hard during the final 20 days. Instead of five or six hours in session each day, he is going to schedule some eight-hour

Whether the legislative temper can take that or not is debatable.

Last week's performance was a little scary.

There are some who believe Governor Exon cast a spell over the senators when he addressed them on Wednesday. They were growly and grouchy the rest of the week.

About this time of the session, most senators are weary of listening to their colleagues. Some have even grown a little tired of each other's faces.

And the strain is beginning to show. The easy tasks are done; only hard decisions lie ahead.

The pressure will mount during these final four weeks. Not only will senators be called upon to work harder, longer and faster to clear away a major portion of their backlog of work, but the decisions will be rougher and tougher to and, perhaps, a senator's political dreams. With the pressure rising, the governor strode before the Legislature last week and tightened the screws.

Spend beyond my budget, he said, and you are the ones who will be held responsible for the resulting tax increases.

The message came home very clearly to senators: The governor would make sure the people knew who sent their taxes rising, if they go beyond the 13% personal income and 21/2% state sales tax rates recommended by Exon.

The governor's revenue and budget lecture sounded similar to one he delivered in 1973. And its effect on the senators was somewhat the

In 1973, they turned surly and resentful, too. Only then, at the behest of Terry Carpenter, they decided to throw Exon's budget right back at him, approving his operational budget bill without change.

That ain't gonna happen this time. Or is it? Senators are certainly not going to take the governor's budget bill and enact it this year. No

But . . . but if they delay the budget process during these next four weeks and enact appropriations bills during the final days of the session and then adjourn without waiting for Exon's item vetoes, they would, in effect, once again be accepting the governor's budget.

That would be irresponsible. That would be abandoning the Legislature's constitutional duty to determine the spending and budgetary needs of the state.

Once the governor receives the Legislature's budget hills, he is going to use his veto power to rewrite them to his own suiting, in effect transforming them into his own budget

That, most certainly, is his constitutional

But the Legislature then ought to use its veto override authority, if it can, to reshape the budget to its own will. That is its clear constitutional duty.

Perhaps there is no legislative thought of doing otherwise.

But, beginning today, time is running out. $\triangle \quad \triangle \quad \triangle$

Still unresolved in the Unicameral is proposed funding to finally begin construction on a new state prison.

The facility would replace the decaying and dangerous old Men's Reformatory. Prison funding has been delayed year after year, caught in the midst first of a legislativegubernatorial squabble, then in the grip of an intra-mural senatorial scrap.

This year, the proposal must buck strong sentiment against any new capital construction

Further delay, excused in some minds by the state of the economy, will only increase future costs and put off the day when Nebraska can really claim to have put its money where its mouth is on penal reform.

like to get it over with and forget But while repeatedly declaring that he has no intention of pointing the figure of blame, President Ford continues to worry the issue with an uncomfortable awareness that he is the commander-in-chief at the moment of this grim climax. He can hardly speak the truth, which is that he inherited the Vietnam disaster, for that would be to pass a large share of the blame

So much of Ford's motivation in pounding on Congress again and again for the military aid must seem a futile political gesture. Knowing Congress out of his long experience, he must have understood from the beginning that it was no more than

who made Ford president.

As he began to make his appeals, there was an estimated $900 million in military supplies not yet sent to Saigon. Of this, $200 million was in the pipeline and up to $700 million obligated but not expended.

"Is This One Of Our National-Unity Days Or Both?"

What Ford surely knew, too, was that even if Congress in, say, early March had appropriated the $722 million he was requesting, it would have been not weeks but months before the bulk of it, particularly complex items, could have been on the

As one official put it, the real reason was morale. Congress could have told Nguyen Van Their and the world that the United States intended to stand behind the South Victnamese and with this pledge Thieu's armies would have fought on.

Who Must Accept The Blame?

In my opinion that is a highly doubtful proposition. The only thing that would have changed the situation is direct American intervention with bombers and troops. That is the morale builder Thieu had apparently continued to hope for. Which was understandable in a man trapped in the blind alley of his own past.

It is truly remarkable that President Ford shared this view as he revealed in the CBS interview. The Congress, he said, "unfortunately" took away from the President in August 1973 the Cooper-Church amendment "the power to move in a military way to enforce the agreements that were signed in Paris." That can only mean that if he had not been hobbled by Congress he would have reopened American participation in the war, as the only way to save Thieu. $\triangle \triangle \triangle$

We shall hear a great deal as the noose tightens and the end draws near about bloodbaths. Already we have seen nightly on television the desperate plight of the refugees fleeing from communism. The horrors of the communist takeover in Hue during the Tet offensive of 1968, burial alive for many victims, were written large.

But in any accounting of blood hatreds, it is well to remember there is much on both sides of the bloodstained ledger. When Secretary Kissinger's peace negotiations with Hanoi broke down in Paris in mid-December 1972, President Nixon gave the communists 72 hours to go back to the table. When that deadline passed, he unleashed terror bombing on a scale never known before with fleets of B-52s, Phantoms and Navy fighter-bombers.

In a two-week period, much of Hanor was razed. In the suburb of Thai Nguyen, nearly a thousand civilians were dead or wounded. The two principal hospitals and a dispensary were destroyed. On the walls left standing, angry slogans were chalked, "We will avenge our compatriots massacred by the Americans," "Nixon, you will pay this blood debt.'

Opinion around the world was revolted. The newspapaer Le Monde in Paris compared the bombing to the Nazi leveling of Guernica in the Spanish civil war. The revulsion publicly expressed reflected the intense feeling in almost every chancellery in the west.

At the end of two weeks of carpet bombing, which by its very nature could have little relation to military targets, the communists agreed to resume negotiations. At the end of the 24th round of talks in 42 months, the accords were signed - those accords that have proved no barrier at all against a resumption of the war.

I received the notice of the labor union interviews on April 9, inviting me to appear on April 12. Baldwin angrily denied the anecdote. "There's absolutely not a word of truth in it," he told us. But we have had access to the records, which show that Baldwin billed Onassis for $43,-855,84. 'Making A Good City Better'

When he was first elected mayor eight vears ago Sam Schwartzkopf was an administrative and political greenhorn, to be sure, but he was a listener, eager to learn the ropes, welcoming good advice and interested in hearing what Lincolnites all across the spectrum had to say. With his smashing re-election triumph four years ago, Mayor Sam stopped listening, in our opinion, and that is one of the major problems facing him and the city today.

Sam Schwartzkopf has not been a bad mayor; Lincoln is a good clean city with a talented citizenry and a complex decisionmaking structure and it can get along, if it has to, without dynamic leadership at the top. And it has. Many of the things that the mayor takes credit for that have happened during the past eight years would have happened with or without him and in certain areas he has been gently nudged and sometimes pushed into a leadership role. In some areas, there has been a leadership vacuum which has been filled, in part, by the City Council. Some of those areas in which the mayor has come up short: adequate advance planning for the use of revenue sharing funds, especially in the human services area; planning ahead for the phasing out of the Lincoln Electric System's steam heat operation and taking a needed look, in that regard, to the possibilities of using solid waste; an action plan for street improvements and - the Centrum project aside - the overall problem of parking. In the aforementioned areas, and in others, executive leadership has been exerted at a minimal level.

The mayor, on the other hand, has during his eight years in office devised a workable snow removal program; he has taken the proper cautious approach to planning and zoning and has not flinched from using his veto pen (in the zoning area he and his opponent have agreed more often than not); he endorses the separate corrections function idea which was initiated and quietly pushed by others, among them council members; he has implemented some changes in the police department that were recommended by a council-initiated study and during his administration was begun a promising neighborhood redevelopment program. But again, in some of this, the mayor did not lead, but was led.

Although Sam Schwartzkopf has been "not a bad mayor," that is not enough for Lincoln. This city deserves the best mayor it can elect.

Lincoln voters on May 6 have the opportunity to vote for a candidate. Helen Boosalis, who in our opinion would be an excellent mayor of the City of Lincoln.

Mrs. Boosalis has been president of the City Council during some of these past few years when the council was forced, by default, to take on executive as well as legislative functions.

It is safe to say that few Lincolnites have as deep and thorough an understanding of Lincoln municipal affairs as does Helen Boosalis. And few public servants have been as open and as sensitive to the needs of differing elements of the community as she.

And one of those elements with needs she has been sensitive to is the business community. Her record during 16 years of the City Council completely refutes the irresponsible assertsions that have floated about during the campaign that she is "anti business" or "anti growth." She has been a respecter of and has cooperated with business interests downtown and elsewhere and she has assiduously worked for orderly growth and the record will bear her out on that.

The fact that she is willing to listen to any and all interests, however, and the fact that she speaks her own mind and is fiercely independent may stick in the throats of some, but we think a vast majority of Lincolnites respect those qualities.

Something exciting is happening in this town. Increasingly, by greater numbers, average citizens who never were a part of it before are beginning to realize that they can affect the decisions which affect them. They can have input in government; they can be a part of building the future of their city. Helen Boosalis has asked for that input and interest and welcomes it. It is a cliche but it applies in this instance: Helen Boosalis is a public official who listens. Through her, the people will have a voice.

In our opinion, Helen Boosalis' style, competence and approach more than the incumbent's are complementary to the image Lincolnites hold of this city. And that, too, should count for something.

The Lincoln Star supports Helen Boosalis for mayor.

Starting today, the Legislature heads into its final four weeks of the 1975 session.

Speaker Jules Burbach is aiming for adjournment May 23, just before the three-day Memorial Day holiday which extends from May 24-26.

In order to reach that goal, Burbach plans to work the senators hard during the final 20 days. Instead of five or six hours in session each day, he is going to schedule some eight-hour

Whether the legislative temper can take that or not is debatable.

Last week's performance was a little scary. There are some who believe Governor Exon cast a spell over the senators when he addressed them on Wednesday. They were growly and grouchy the rest of the week. About this time of the session, most senators are weary of listening to their colleagues. Some have even grown a little tired of each other's faces.

And the strain is beginning to show. The easy tasks are done; only hard decisions lie ahead.

The pressure will mount during these final four weeks. Not only will senators be called upon to work harder, longer and faster to clear away a major portion of their backlog of work, but the decisions will be rougher and tougher to

No more state insect bills. Now come the tax proposals, the budgeting bills, spending plans, individual senatorial priorities, the key and costly decisions which shape a state's future and, perhaps, a senator's political dreams.

With the pressure rising, the governor strode before the Legislature last week and tightened the screws.

Spend beyond my budget, he said, and you are the ones who will be held responsible for the resulting tax increases.

The message came home very clearly to senators: The governor would make sure the people knew who sent their taxes rising, if they go beyond the 13% personal income and 21/2% state sales tax rates recommended by Exon.

The governor's revenue and budget lecture sounded similar to one he delivered in 1973. And its effect on the senators was somewhat the

In 1973, they turned surly and resentful, too. Only then, at the behest of Terry Carpenter, they decided to throw Exon's budget right back at him, approving his operational budget bill without change.

That ain't gonna happen this time. Or is it? Senators are certainly not going to take the governor's budget bill and enact it this year. No

But . . . but if they delay the budget process during these next four weeks and enact appropriations bills during the final days of the session and then adjourn without waiting for Exon's item vetoes, they would, in effect, once again be accepting the governor's budget.

That would be irresponsible. That would be abandoning the Legislature's constitutional duty to determine the spending and budgetary needs of the state.

Once the governor receives the Legislature's budget bills, he is going to use his veto power to rewrite them to his own suiting, in effect transforming them into his own budget recommendations.

That, most certainly, is his constitutional

But the Legislature then ought to use its veto override authority, if it can, to reshape the budget to its own will. That is its clear constitutional duty.

Perhaps there is no legislative thought of doing otherwise.

But, beginning today, time is running out.

公 公 公 Still unresolved in the Unicameral is proposed funding to finally begin construction on a new state prison.

The facility would replace the decaying and dangerous old Men's Reformatory.

Prison funding has been delayed year after year, caught in the midst first of a legislativegubernatorial squabble, then in the grip of an intra-mural senatorial scrap.

This year, the proposal must buck strong sentiment against any new capital construction

Further delay, excused in some minds by the state of the economy, will only increase future costs and put off the day when Nebraska can really claim to have put its money where its mouth is on penal reform.

WASHINGTON - Sifting the true from the false in examining the fall of South Vietnam will be an endless pursuit. As reflected in Congress and the public opinion polls, most people would like to get it over with and forget

But while repeatedly declaring that he has no intention of pointing the figure of blame, President Ford continues to worry the issue with an uncomfortable awareness that he is the commander-in-chief at the moment of this grim climax. He can hardly speak the truth, which is that he inherited the Vietnam disaster, for that would be to pass a large share of the blame to his immediate predecessor, Richard Nixon. And it was Nixon who made Ford president.

So much of Ford's motivation in pounding on Congress again and again for the military aid must seem a futile political gesture. Knowing Congress out of his long experience, he must have understood from the beginning that it was no more than sky-writing.

As he began to make his appeals, there was an estimated $900 million in military supplies not yet sent to Saigon. Of this, $200 million was in the pipeline and up to $700 million obligated but not expended.

The bureaucratic process being as cumbersome as it is, the committed materiel, much of it ammunition, has only recently been in the final forwarding

As one official put it, the real reason was morale. Congress could have told Nguyen Van bulk of it, particularly complex Theiu and the world that the behind the South Vietnamese and with this pledge Thieu's armies would have fought on.

In my opinion that is a highly doubtful proposition. The only thing that would have changed the situation is direct American intervention with bombers and troops. That is the morale builder Thieu had apparently continued to hope for. Which was understandable in a man trapped in the blind alley of his own past.

It is truly remarkable that President Ford shared this view as he revealed in the CBS interview. The Congress, he said, "unfortunately" took away from the President in August 1973 the Cooper-Church amendment "the power to move in a military way to enforce the agreements that were signed in Paris." That can only mean that if he had not been hobbled by Congress he would have reopened American participation in the war, as the only way to save Thieu.

We shall hear a great deal as the noose tightens and the end draws near about bloodbaths. Already we have seen nightly on television the desperate plight of the refugees fleeing from communism. The horrors of the communist takeover in Hue during the Tet offensive of 1968. burial alive for many victims, were written large.

But in any accounting of blood hatreds, it is well to remember there is much on both sides of

United States intended to stand the bloodstained ledger. When Secretary Kissinger's peace negotiations with Hanoi broke down in Paris in mid-December 1972, President Nixon gave the communists 72 hours to go back to the table. When that deadline passed, he unleashed terror bombing on a scale never known before with fleets of B-52s, Phantoms and Navy fighter-bombers.

In a two-week period, much of Hanoi was razed. In the suburb of Thai Nguyen, nearly a thousand civilians were dead or wounded. The two principal hospitals and a dispensary were destroyed. On the walls left standing, angry slogans were chalked, "We will avenge our compatriots massacred by the Americans," "Nixon, you will pay this blood debt.'

Opinion around the world was revolted. The newspapaer Le Monde in Paris compared the bombing to the Nazi leveling of Guernica in the Spanish civil war. The revulsion publicly expressed reflected the intense feeling in almost every chancellery in the west.

At the end of two weeks of carpet bombing, which by its very nature could have little relation to military targets, the communists agreed to resume negotiations. At the end of the 24th round of talks in 42 months, the accords were signed - those accords that have proved no barrier at all against a resumption of the war.

Jeambey Learned 'What's Going On As a newsman for ten years

Bob Jeambey learned a lot about "what's going on in this city." He's worked for three radio stations, the local television station and for a newspaper.

As news director for KFOR he returned "just in time for the Starkweather bash." He followed the man-hunt from the beginning to the end, where he was one of the official news witnesses to Starkweather's execution.

 Jeambey, 44, always has been interested in the media, and in particularly, how religious groups use them to get their messages out to the people.

Like seven other people, Jeambey is using the media to some extent to get another message across. He is running for the City Council.

Jeambey is also a Presbyterian minister and has been involved in a wide range of community activities. He and his wife Shirley and two daughters live at 400 Skyway Rd.

He helped to "revolutionize" the church's use of mass media and while in New York for three years, he helped film a documentary on the plight of the Cuban Refugees. The documentary subsequently was aired by ABC television.

"I never thought I'd be back in Lincoln, but here I am," he says. His interest in city government increased as chairman of the citizens' Goals and Policies Committee.

Jeambey calls himself a "reluctant candidate" because he was more or less pushed into the race by people who wanted him on the council. He declined to run for the job two years ago.

Sees Cross-Roads He conceeded to seek office this time because he believes the council will be at a cross-roads when it acts on the Comprehensive Plan, now being written.

"If I lose, maybe I ought to lose," he said candidly.

"I believe a candidate ought to have the track record in the community.

Jeambey obviously feels he has that record to be elected to office next week.

Jeambey, 44, always has been interested in the media, and in particularly, how religious groups use them to get their messages out to the people.

Like seven other people, Jeambey is using the media to some extent to get another message across. He is running for the City Council.

Jeambey is also a Presbyterian minister and has been involved in a wide range of community activities. He and his wife Shirley and two daughters live at 400 Skyway Rd.

NWU Graduate A 1955 graduate of Nebraska Wesleyan University, he went to San Francisco Theological Bob Jeambey Seminary to become a minister.

After a year and a half, he dropped out, returned to Lincoln and became a newsman.

He was just getting settled in, he explains, when he was "called to New York" to head up a television unit for the Presbyterian Church.

He helped to "revolutionize" the church's use of mass media and while in New York for three years, he helped film a documentary on the plight of the Cuban Refugees. The documentary subsequently was aired by ABC television.

He returned to San Francisco, partially because "its the only seminary in the country that offered religious mass media courses.

served a church in Omaha for four years, worked in Chicago for about a year and returned to Lincoln in the summer of 1970 to take on his present job. He is the executive secretary of Interchurch Ministries of Nebraska and program director for the Lincoln Fellowship of Churches.

"I never thought I'd be back in Lincoln, but here I am," he says. His interest in city government increased as chairman of the citizens' Goals and Policies Committee.

Jeambey calls himself a "reluctant candidate" because he was more or less pushed into the race by people who wanted him on the council. He declined to run for the job two years ago.

Sees Cross-Roads He conceeded to seek office this time because he believes the council will be at a cross-roads when it acts on the Comprehensive Plan, now being written. After having worked on the Goals and Policies Committee for several years, Jeambey says has that record to be elected to he'd hate to see the committee's office next week

Despite running a low-key campaign, Jeambey came in third in a field of 15 candidates in April's primary election. Because of his community activities, he is one of the better known candidates.

"If I lose, maybe I ought to lose," he said candidly.

"I believe a candidate ought to have the track record in the community.

If your family budget calls for fewer weekend vacation trips this summer, you might consider a remodeling project at home which may add value to your property as well as provide activity for the entire family.

And you can spend as little or as much as you wish and still make significant changes.

The Don Jirsas of rural Milford, who moved into an old farm home three years ago, found that about $200 plus many hours of sanding, staining and varnishing resulted in a new looking

Too Expensive

Mrs. Jirsa said it was going to cost about $3,000 to put in all new cupboards and "we just couldn't afford that, so we made do with what we had."

The couple sanded down the old cupboards, stained and revarnished them, took off the old hardware and polished it and then paneled the cupboard doors with wallpaper which matched

The double windows above the sink formerly covered with shades and curtains were changed by the use of shutters stained to match the cupboards.

The lower half of the window was covered with the louvred shutters while shutter panels for the upper half picked up the pattern of the wallpaper in matching fabric.

For about $1,500 the Dan Cudas had all new kitchen cabinets built into the kitchen of their 35-year-old home at 2314 Sewell. Double Value

Cuda, who is a real estate broker, estimates that an owner can double the value of his property with home improvements. Cuda said he has remodeled several homes for resale and today there is a demand for older homes for remodeling by prospective buyers. "I enjoy doing it when I have time," he said, as he pointed to the various areas which he and his wife have remodeled in their In addition to doing the kitchen — which involved installation of custom-built cupboards and an island to accommodate the stove and make a U-shaped work area - they installed sliding glass doors onto a patio.

Access Needed

We needed an access to the backyard for the children without their having to go up the driveway," Mrs. Cuda said. Another major project the Cudas have undertaken in their spare time is finishing the basement.

The focal point in the basement is the old fireplace which Cuda took out of a rental property bedroom and installed in the basement.

The Cudas paneled the basement walls up halfway and utilized a flocked wallpaper on the upper portion of the drywall. Molding Dressed Up

Cuda said he couldn't find molding that went with the paneling to go along the mid-line where the wallpaper and paneling meet, so he covered some inexpensive pine molding with the flocked

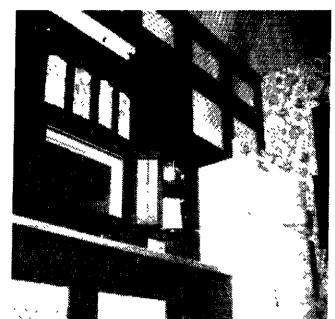

Although remodeling to add to the value of property is a good idea, it is possible to overimprove a home for resale in a particular neighborhood. Cuda warns.

He also said that people can do their own work and get professional-looking results, but warned against being the "super handyman" and tackling too big a job.

Cuda reommended careful study before making far-reaching

Price Of Tea Forced Up By Drought, Poor Crops

Americans are sipping more most other foods in price intea than ever these days but creases over the past few years drought and poor yields in tea producing areas are forcing tea prices upward.

According to extension home economists at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, tea imports are soaring and consumption is on the upswing but a steep rise in prices is expected by the end

A drought in most tea producing areas of East Africa and a poor crop in Ceylon as well as inflation and world monetary conditions are the reasons for the expected increases.

Early day technology was sort of rule of thumb, according to Jeff Butcher, SCS information officer who has been researching some early data and talking with old-timers in the service.

'They used to test the ability of a soil to hold water for a farm pond by making a mud ball and throwing it up against the side of a car door. If it stuck, they built a pond," he recalled. Today, farm ponds can be sealed in a number of ways to prevent leaks that were not available to past soil scientists.

Parker makes it plain that the problems that caused the Soil Conservation Service to be established haven't gone away.

'We have lost an awful lot of soil in western Nebraska this year that needn't have blown away if farmers had just kept some growth on those fields to prevent the earth from moving,"

"Soil is still our major problem in streams, the worst pollutant we have. We have to work harder to keep the soil from blowing or washing away in cities as well as on farms," he added.

Construction projects are major sources of soil pollution in streams, storm sewage systems and lake beds according to Parker, who cites Holmes Lake in Lincoln as a problem area.

"There are a lot of things that contractors could do to minimize the amount of earth that washes away from a building site. Some of the better ones do come to us fort to reduce soil loss from rains on unprotected soil at construction sites." Parker said.

Parker admitted some farmers' objections to the SCS working with city people stem from the history of the organization which began as a soil conserving aid to farmers. "City people pay taxes too. Our soils information is as important to a home builder trying to avoid a wet basement or cracked walls as it is to a farmer trying to select a crop for a particular field," Parker said.

Parker noted that there are a lot of new faces at SCS offices today. "We have a lot of oldtimers who are at or approaching retirement age who will be leaving the agency soon."

Federal restrictions on hiring new employees have resulted in a lot of transfers as SCS officials try to keep as many slots filled as possible. "We have had some reduction in overall manpower, but I think we are settling down to a workable level. I sure hope we don't get too many more cuts, because demands on our services are increasing," Parker said.

There is a whole new generation of farmers who have grown up with the Soil Conservation Service who cannot recall the days when dirt storms of the '30s blotted out the sun at high noon and gullies were the rule in fields, rather than the exception.

Educating the new farmers is a never-ending process, but we think it is the best way to do it." Parker said

It was 40 years ago that the Soil Conservation Service was born in an effort to keep dust storms down and end the flow of soils into rivers, lakes and streams in the nation.

Bill Parker, the state conservationist who heads the federal agency in Nebraska, estimates that the job is about 40% completed.

Asked why so little is done after so many years, Parker notes that his organization is not a regulatory agency.

"We can only try to educate people about what needs to be done and do the engineering that the projects require. We can't force them to build terraces or to farm so their soil won't blow away," he said.

Kenneth Frick, administrator of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS), had a rather bad day in front of a congressional committee interested in conservation programs. Irritated congressmen threatened to find a way to withhold Frick's salary at one point in the discussion.

The net result of the hassle is that the conservation program survived another year and farmers will once again have a chance to get some help in keeping their soil from washing or blowing away.

Washington Bullets hustled "and got lucky" Sunday while the Boston Celtics relaxed and got burned in the opening game of the National Basketball Association Eastern Conference championship round.

"We just did a better job in the second half," said Haves. 'They didn't help themselves. If you've got a big lead like that (55-43 at the half), sometimes you try to protect it and sometimes you try to build it up.

Hayes went right back to the basket and Phil Chenier scored another bucket around Cowens' replacement, Henry Finkel, and the Bullets took their win over the defending NBA champs.

Boston scored 10 of the next 14 points, four by Cowens who was hurried back into the lineup, to trail 84-83 midway through the period. But another hoop by Chenier, who finished with 24 points, and two by Nick Weatherspoon built the Bullets buildge back to seven at 90-83.

The teams traded baskets to the buzzer, the Bullets having outscored the Celtics 57-40 in the second half.

The Ceitics seemingly had the game going their way through the first two periods as they built a 55-43 halftime lead. They abandoned their usual fast break style in favor of finding the open man on set offensive plays Jo Jo White had 13 of his 27 points in the opening half, while John Havlicek, Cowens and Don Chaney scored 10 apiece.

Washington's scoring was confined mostly to 15-foot turnarounds by Hayes and Chorice's driving layers The Washington's scoring was Chenier's driving layups. The two combined for 28 of the Bullets' points in the opening Omaha — Dick Becker was just like most of the other Sunday patrons at Ak-Sar-Ben — dis--appointed.

"That's the first time in the 13 years I've been here that we had to cancel the open house races," said Ak-Sar-Ben's executive director and general manager after a torrential rainstorm at noontime halted the four exhibition races and workouts slated for Sunday afternoon.

"There was a lot of lightning and it would have been dangerous for the jockeys and horses," Becker added. "We didn't want to take a chance with any getting hurt since they were only exhibitions.

The decision was made at 1:30 to discard the races. That still didn't bother many of the estimated 4,000-5,000 visitors for Ak-Sar-Ben's annual open house.

Although the rains stopped in midafternoon, Becker said it was too late to reschedule the races.

Nevertheless, Ak-Sar-Ben's boss is more than confident this will be the best season ever for the Omaha track, which opens its 56-day meeting on Tuesday.

We have to be optimistic since the other meets that we watch carefully did so well this year," Becker said, noting that Fonner Park in Grand Island accomplished an attendance gain of nearly six per cent and a mutual handle increase of 11.7 per cent.

"We hope we can do as well as Fonner," Becker said. "But when we're trying to be up six per cent going against nearly 15,000 a day (actually, 14,937), that's kind of tough. Each year, we have been building up a little, though."

For actual figures, Ak-Sar-Ben is hoping to better 850,000 for the season's attendance and achieve a record daily mutuel handle average of

Becker noted that Ak-Sar-Ben finished last year's season with eight straight days of $1 million or more in mutuel handle

Noting that more than 2,000 applications were received for the 1,200 available horse stalls, Becker said competition was intense for

"Our screening committee had a difficult decision like they always do," he said. "Besides the horses we've also got between 100 and 125 ponies that need stalls. But we tried to get a balance of horses like we always do." NOTES — New clocker Gene Swartz' uncle,

If Hayes didn't lick Boston himself, he certainly helped with 12 rebounds and a game high 34 points. Six of those points came in a 10-0 run at the start of the final period. The outpouring lifted Washington from a 73-70 deficit to an 80-73 advantage.

"We just did a better job in the second half," said Hayes. 'They didn't help themselves. If you've got a big lead like that (55-43 at the half), sometimes you try to protect it and sometimes you try to build it up.

Foyt, Petty Notch Stocker Wins

AUTO RACING

A.J. Fovt won the stock car and over-all titles at the World Series of Auto Racing in Trenton and Johnny Rutherford scored a runaway victory in the Indianapolis car event.

Foyt had been the pre-race favorite in both 150-mile events and started from the pole position in both races but he finished fourth in the Indy car race after problems during two pit stops. Foyt won the overall title based on points awarded for the four races in the series. He won the sprint car race and was sixth in the midget car race.

Richard Petty took the lead with 20 laps to go and won the Virginia 500 Grand National stock car race at Martinsville, Va. It was Petty's 14th career win at the speedway. Darrell Waltrip

Jim Colbert, the chipper little veteran who led the first round., was in the fight until the closing holes and finished with 71-297 and fourth alone.

It was another five strokes back to U.S. Open champion Hale Irwin and Buddy Allin, tied for fifth at 274. Irwin had a closing 70, Allin matched par 72.

Masters champion Jack Nicklaus struggled to a 74 in the last round but tied for ninth at 287.

Nicklaus, however, had a major consolation. He took over the season's money winning lead, knocking Johnny Miller out of that position for the first time since the first week of January, 1974.

Nicklaus collected $5,945 and now has total winnings for the year of $155,187.

Miller, dead last in the field of 30 starting the final round of play, uncorked a brilliant, sevder-par 65 that pulled up to a tie for 15th. He collected $4,413 and now is second on the money list at $153,889.

Haynie Captures Playoff

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP) -Sandra Haynie cooly cut down Amy Alcott and Judy Rankin in a sudden death playoff Sunday to win the $45,000 Charity Golf Classic for the third straight

The trio deadlocked at oneunder-par 212 after three trips around the windswept Woodhaven Country Club course, and Miss Haynie took the title with a par three at the fourth extra hole from 18-feet, while the 19year-old Miss Alcott, a tour rookie, failed on a 15-footer after missing the green from the tee.

Miss Rankin dropped from the battle with a bogey at the first hole, three-putting from 30 feet.

Miss Haynie, who matched Miss Alcott's 70 on the par-71 layout, earned $6,400 for the triumph, her second of the season, and shoved her earnings for the year to $20,000.

AN OPEN LETTER to All Merchants and Other Friends of Public Television in Nebraska. . .

Wednesday, April 30, volunteer members of Nebraskans for Public Television will begin our "Auction '75", our second annual auction on the Nebraska ETV Network. We have scheduled five evenings of auction activity that will involve more than a thousand studio volunteers and thousands upon thousands of viewers of ETV all across Nebraska.

Proceeds from the auction will go toward helping make possible a variety of public television programs and series on the Nebraska ETV Network -programs that would not otherwise be offered the children and adults of Nebraska.

As a result of the marvelous cooperation last year from a great number of merchant and individual contributors, we raised our goal last year. Most of those who contributed to last year's auction have again been very generous in their support -- for which we are very thankful.

But we need much more assistance if we are to achieve our goal this year!

We need your help with a contribution of one or more items or services. You will be acknowledged as contributing when each item or service is presented and later sold on ETV. Each item must have a value of $25 or more, and contributions are tax deductible.

Phone the auction office, (402)472-3611, and join the auction action now!

Sincerely,

General Chairman. "Auction '75"

AN OPEN LETTER to All Merchants and Other Friends of Public Television in Nebraska. . .

Wednesday, April 30, volunteer members of Nebraskans for Public Television will begin our "Auction '75", our second annual auction on the Nebraska ETV Network. We have scheduled five evenings of auction activity that will involve more than a thousand studio volunteers and thousands upon thousands of viewers of ETV all across Nebraska.

Proceeds from the auction will go toward helping make possible a variety of public television programs and series on the Nebraska ETV Network -programs that would not otherwise be offered the children and adults of Nebraska.

As a result of the marvelous cooperation last year from a great number of merchant and individual contributors, we raised our goal last year. Most of those who contributed to last year's auction have again been very generous in their support -- for which we are very thankful.

But we need much more assistance if we are to achieve our goal this year!

We need your help with a contribution of one or more items or services. You will be acknowledged as contributing when each item or service is presented and later sold on ETV. Each item must have a value of $25 or more, and contributions are tax deductible.

Phone the auction office, (402)472-3611, and join the auction action now!

Sincerely,

General Chairman. "Auction '75"

Nebraska City - The University of Nebraska will appoint a full-time curator to begin development of a network of arboretums across the state, NU President D. B. Varner said at the 103rd annual Arbor Day celebration Sunday.

To be known as Nebraska's Statewide Arboretum, the network of tree plantings will initially include existing sites such as Arbor Lodge, the Maxwell Arboretum on the UNL East Campus, NU's North Platte and Panhandle Stations, Kimball Reservoir and rest areas along Interstate 80.

The curator will begin planning, cataloguing and laying out designs July 1, Varner said.

Long Dream

He said the modest first step toward an arboretum is the realization of a dream shared by many Nebraskans for many years. A variety of public and private organizations formed the Council for Nebraska's Statewide Arboretum to boost the idea, he said.

Arboretum sites will contain native or

introduced plant species which have value to Nebraskans as food, fiber, or timber, sun and wind protection, wildlife food and cover, erosion control, noise abatement and beautification. Varner was the featured speaker at the annual program held on the west porch of Arbor Lodge, palatial home of J. Sterling Morton, the early Nebraska statesman who founded Arbor Day as a reminder of the multiple value of trees.

Weather Uncooperative The sparsely attended program proceeded as planned despite occasional showers and an early-afternoon sounding of the town's tornado sirens. There was an unconfirmed report of a funnel cloud sighting west of town.

Perhaps even more disappointing, Nebraska City's famed apple, flowering crab, redbud and dogwood trees were not yet in bloom due to a long winter. A few magnolias and forsythia shrubs were blooming, and Arbor Lodge's tulips were just beginning to open.

Nebraska City's Arbor Day festivities are traditionally held late in April when the city's spring finery is at its most

New heating, air conditioning and underground utility systems for the mansion were not complete and won't be for nearly a month, said Arbor Lodge State Historical Park caretaker Craig Bergman. Nevertheless, the stately house and its wooded grounds opened for the season as scheduled Friday.

Also honored at the Arbor Lodge ceremony was local restaurateur Mary Ulbrick, named Arbor Day honoree for her many civic activities including longtime assistance with the Arbor Day program.

In accordance with a 70-yard tradition, a redbud tree was planted in honor of Mrs. Ulbrick. The first memorial tree was planted in 1905 in honor of former President Grover Cleveland.

Named best entry in the parade preceding the ceremony were the Omaha Shriners. The float entered by the Nebraska School for the Visually Handicapped was judged the entry best befitting the "Trees for Tomorrow" theme of the parade, and John Peterson took honors for the best antique entry with his Model A pickup.

UNL To Change Memorial Day Closing To 26th

The University of Nebraska-Lincoln will be closed on May 26 for Memorial Day due to a bill adopted by the Nebraska Legislature and signed into law by Gov. J. James Exon.

Memorial Day had been scheduled for observance May 30, but the bill adopted this session changed the observance date to May 26.

He said there will be no presession classes on May 26, but classes will be held May 30. A make up day, which had been scheduled for May 24, was rescheduled for May 31, he said.

Chicago (AP) — A helicopter crashed and burned on top of a South Side building Sunday while transporting concrete blocks, but its pilot escaped without injury, authorities said.

Fire Commissioner Robert J. Quinn said the helicopter was hovering about 15 feet over the roof of the five-story Eastman Kodak Color Print Photograph Laboratory to pick up a concrete block weighing about 1,500 pounds, when the craft plummeted te the roof.

A spokesman for the Federal Aviation Administration said the pilot, Robert Gaylord, 50, Oak Lawn, escaped from the wreckage just before it burst into flames.

Statewide Arboretum Set

By JOEL THORSON Outstate Nebraska Bureau

Nebraska City - The University of Nebraska will appoint a full-time curator to begin development of a network of arboretums across the state, NU President D. B. Varner said at the 103rd annual Arbor Day celebration Sunday.

To be known as Nebraska's Statewide Arboretum, the network of tree plantings will initially include existing sites such as Arbor Lodge, the Maxwell Arboretum on the UNL East Campus, NU's North Platte and Panhandle Stations, Kimball Reservoir and rest areas along Interstate 80.

The curator will begin planning. cataloguing and laying out designs July 1, Varner said.

Long Dream

He said the modest first step toward an arboretum is the realization of a dream shared by many Nebraskans for many years. A variety of public and private organizations formed the Council for Nebraska's Statewide Arboretum to boost the idea, he said.

Arboretum sites will contain native or introduced plant species which have value to Nebraskans as food, fiber, or timber, sun and wind protection, wildlife food and cover, erosion control, noise abatement and beautification.

Varner was the featured speaker at the annual program held on the west porch of Arbor Lodge, palatial home of J. Sterling Morton, the early Nebraska statesman who founded Arbor Day as a reminder of the multiple value of trees.

Weather Uncooperative The sparsely attended program proceeded as planned despite occasional showers and an early-afternoon sounding of the town's tornado sirens. There was an unconfirmed report of a funnel cloud sighting west of town.

Perhaps even more disappointing, Nebraska City's famed apple, flowering crab, redbud and dogwood trees were not yet in bloom due to a long winter. A few magnolias and forsythia shrubs were blooming, and Arbor Lodge's tulips were just beginning to open.

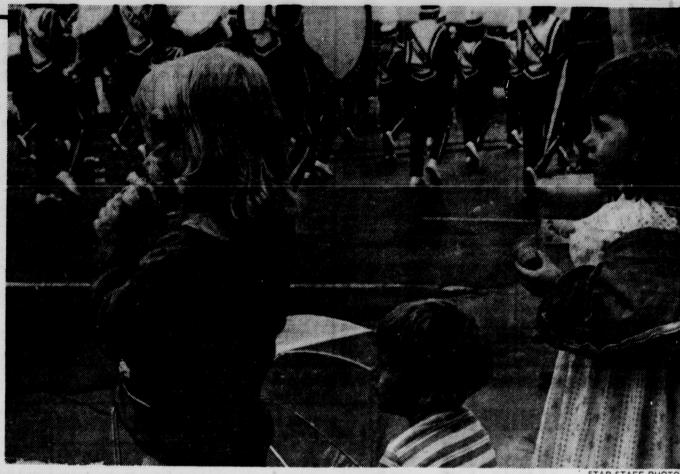

Nebraska City's Arbor Day festivities are traditionally held late in April when the city's spring finery is at its most colorful.

New heating, air conditioning and underground utility systems for the mansion were not complete and won't be for nearly a month, said Arbor Lodge State Historical Park caretaker Craig Bergman. Nevertheless, the stately house and its wooded grounds opened for the season as scheduled Friday.

Also honored at the Arbor Lodge ceremony was local restaurateur Mary Ulbrick, named Arbor Day honoree for her many civic activities including longtime assistance with the Arbor Day program.

In accordance with a 70-yard tradition, a redbud tree was planted in honor of Mrs. Ulbrick. The first memorial tree was planted in 1905 in honor of former President Grover Cleveland.

Named best entry in the parade preceding the ceremony were the Omaha Shriners. The float entered by the Nebraska School for the Visually Handicapped was judged the entry best befitting the "Trees for Tomorrow" theme of the parade, and John Peterson took honors for the best antique entry with his Model A pickup.

PACKING UP ... Mike Kinnimon also has to get greasepaint off.

UNL To Change Memorial Day Closing To 26th

The University of Nebraska-Lincoln will be closed on May 26 for Memorial Day due to a bill adopted by the Nebraska Legislature and signed into law by Gov. J. James Exon.

Memorial Day had been scheduled for observance May 30, but the bill adopted this session changed the observance date to May 26.

The schedule of the threeweek presession also will be adjusted, said Dr. William Sesow, associate director of summer sessions at the universi-

He said there will be no presession classes on May 26, but classes will be held May 30. A make up day, which had been scheduled for May 24, was rescheduled for May 31, he said.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE - Here's how to work it: AXYDLBAAXR is LONGFELLOW

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

☆ By SIDNEY OMARR ☆

Forecast For Monday

Favorite Cancer: Merv Griffin; puzzling Aquarian: Norman Mailer; vitat Aries: Gloria Swanson; Taurus sentimental favorite: Joe Louis; Gemini ditemma: Chad Everett; Leo sex symbol: Mae West; Virgo courage: Joan Kennedy: Libra voice; Glynis Johns; Scorpio great: Katharine Hepburn; Sagittarius wiseacre: John Davidson: Capricorn literary giant: Henry Miller; Pisces dynamo: Liza Minelli: How do your "interesting people" tit their zodiacal signs?

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You receive communication from one who had been "underground." You are called upon for independent, creative action. Key now is to be aware of your own needs, potential. Don't give up something for nothing. You'll comprehend! 39 Coal scuttle

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Friendship and money "get together." Means friendly tip could result in profitable maneuver. Partnership proposal deserves consideration. You gain now by co-operative efforts — and by forgetting past slights, real or imagined.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Emphasis is on how you resolve what appears to be a major disagreement. Key is to unders-tand that there is plenty of sound and fury, with little substance. Another Gemini — and a Sagittarian — figure prominently. Opposition lacks punch, is a paper tiger.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Low-key approach is best; don't force issues. Remove chip from shoulder. Be careful about details. Build on solid base. Deal with Leo. Aquarius and Scorpio persons. Concern with co-workers is evident — and warranted.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Good Moon aspect spotlights romance, involvement, awareness of desires and costs. Changes occur which lead to travel and a possible written agreement. Gemini, Virgo individuals figure prominently.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Your natural qualifies, assets surge to forefront. Added recognition is due—and so is more money. Chips are down and you could be holding a solid hand.
